CONTEST OVER EIGHT-HOUR LAW

in Printing Trades.

TO OPEN NEXT MONTH

BOTH SIDES OF CONTROVERSY

WELL PREPARED.

Big Fund Raised for Expenses—Statement by Typothetae—Federation

Aids Employes.

“We do not want the eight-hour day by reason of charity or philanthropy. We do not want it in order that our physical or mental well-being may be improved. We refuse to abandon our eight-hour demand because we may under present conditions be more fortunately situated than other artisans. We want the eight-hour workday because we are convinced that it suffices for the work there is to do, the work that is to be done, the demand of society for the product of the press. We propose to sell to the employer eight hours out of the twenty-four, and we will do so as we please with the remaining sixteen.”—Extract from report of eight-hour committee, International Typographical Union.

A struggle that will involve the printing offices throughout the country is to begin next week with the clearly enunciated principle quoted as the cause belli. The fight will be one of principle entirely. There is no such element of human interest in this struggle for supremacy as enters the ordinary war between the employer and the employed. There is no sudden precipitation of hostilities. For months the matter has been under consideration, and months ago this consideration bore fruit in the report that has been cited. Due notice was given the employers by their employees that on a certain date they would make a demand, and each side was given ample opportunity to collect the sinews of war. To prepare for a battle which would decide once and for all time a question that has been one of the most vexatious in the history of the printing industry, organized labor came into being. And whatever way the question is decided, the result will be far-reaching.

Far-Reaching Effect.

As the slowest to provoke trouble, the best-managed and most intelligent of unions, the International organization of printers has always been looked upon by other labor bodies as a leader in all that made for the good of the laboring classes. Whatever it has done, the other unions have also endeavored to do, and wherever it has enunciated a principle the other unions have chorused an “amen” that meant they also would try to do it. It is therefore apparent that the fight of the typographers will be watched closely, not only by all labor organization leaders of whatever kind, but by the employers of all kinds and classes, as the barometer is watched by the farmer who has a field of wheat to cut, or the mariner who has a ship on the sea.

The employers, in this instance, have an organization which is only second in importance to that of the employed. The National Typothetae, made up of employing printers, is regarded by the printers as a formidable foe. Each side believes the graphical Union is regarded by the employers as a strong organization. The preparations that are being made and that have been made for the struggle that is to come is perhaps the best evidence of this fact. Neither side is making flamboyant statements for the purpose of creating public sympathy. Both sides are very much in earnest and are determined to carry the fight to the last ditch, to give no quarter and accept no compromise. Each side believes absolutely right and each side is determined to prove it. To enforce attention to its demands, the Typographical Union has issued, in its duty to the employers, a statement that shops that do not comply with its demands shall suffer through the calling out of all the union printers whom they may happen to employ. This statement has been given the widest publicity. The employers, on their part, have a powerful ally in the International Typothetae, have absolutely refused to comply with the demands and have come out in an equally flat-footed manner.

Statement of Typothetae.

In this city, as in other cities throughout the country, have been given due notice of the conditions that will exist when war is actually on. The notice to the patrons of the printing trade in Washington was received by them this morning. It is signed by sixteen firms of printers who are included in the Washington Typothetae and states:

“Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, having demanded of the employing printers of Washington that they should accept of eight hours of work for the day, and a closed shop, said demand being accompanied with a threat to call out their members, and to refuse to print for any printer who should refuse to accept of the same, the undersigned respectfully submit to their clients and the public the following statement:

“The Typothetae of Washington (member of the National Association of Employing Printers), in response to a communication from Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, requesting a conference to negotiate an agreement concerning hours of labor in printing offices, appointed a committee of five to meet a like committee from the union. The employing printers were fully empowered to enter into any agreement of the kind, and the committee was without result, it being early developed that the committee of five from the union were powerless to transact business, and that the undersigned, as a body with offices at Indianapolis, Ind., the union committee having no powers beyond the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union.

“We maintain the right of every firm to conduct an ‘open’ office—wherein any American citizen may pursue his vocation and reap the benefits of superior knowledge and workmanship untrammelled by influences seeking repression of ability to better up competency. We deny the right of any person or organization to demand a ‘closed shop’—that is, a shop wherein only such persons as have subscribed to the union oath are deemed worthy of employment.

“We maintain the right to conduct our business without the aid of the interference of persons designated by the unions as a system of surveillance repugnant alike to our principles and to the public interest. We maintain the right to sell or purchase from whomsoever we may see fit, without prejudice, it being understood that the laws of demand and supply govern transactions of buying and selling.

“We propose to resist every unwarranted or unjustifiable encroachment of organization upon our rights; and to the full extent of our resources will resist this well-planned and widespread effort of powerful labor leaders to saddle upon our customers an additional charge of from 20 to 30 per cent increase over the present charges for printing—an advance in price the labor leaders unblushingly demand—they claiming it will be no hardship on the employers, who should charge the extra advance to their customers.

“We purpose giving preference to our present employes, having no cause for complaint against them, and are not aware of any grievances they have against us. We stand prepared to enter into binding agreements for one or more years with those desiring to retain positions—many of which have been held for years. Positions vacated will be filled as quickly as practicable with a new force, many of whom are already now engaged. For a short time the new men, unfamiliar with the details of the office and the exigencies of our business, may not be able to so quickly produce the usual output; therefore, we respectfully ask your indulgence. Assuring you of our utmost effort to protect our joint interests and to continue the pursuit of our business as American citizens.”

The Sinews of War.

That is the situation as it is today and as it will be until next week, when the demands of the union are formally made and rejected and the war commences. The employing printers are, many of them, members of the union or ex-members. Some of them, it is said, still carry union cards and have always been in sympathy with union matters, up to and so far as such matters did not interfere with their business. Some sides in the controversy have collected large sums of money with which to carry on the war. Today the members of the Columbia Typographical Union are voting on the proposition to assess all members 10 per cent of their wages to swell the fund. The matter was brought up at a meeting Sunday, and decision was made to decide the question finally by the referendum. Today was set as the day for voting, and the printers have been casting ballots since early this morning. The result will not be known until late this evening, but it is stated that the sentiment of the union is known to be absolutely in favor of the proposition.

Gompers to Aid Union.

Samuel Gompers, the president of the American Federation of Labor, is preparing to lend the printers all the power that lies behind his organization of millions of men. A labor leader said to a Star reporter that: “It is perhaps why that we have allowed the advance movement to be made by an intelligent craft. We are going to lend them all the assistance in our power. Perhaps the boycott, when applied by more than four millions of men, means something. If the boycott ever meant anything, it will in this fight. The labor world is behind the printers in their struggle for what their patron saint said should be adopted by humanity—Eight hours for labor, eight hours for rest and eight hours for recreation.” With this as their shibboleth the army of labor will enter into the eight-hour fight on January 1.

During the week word from the international headquarters at Indianapolis has been received that more than three hundred subordinate unions have obtained the eight-hour day, and that by New Year many more will have secured the conditions. The strike will become general January 2 in all offices that do not concede the eight-hour day, and President James M. Lynch of the International Typographical Union estimates that 10,000 men and women will be affected.

Fund for the Strike.

The printers all over the country have been asked to vote to levy an assessment of 10 per cent on all earnings to finance their movement.

The printers estimate that their income will be at least $100,000 a week, beginning January 1, a sum sufficient to meet all contingencies. When the general strike is inaugurated it is believed that scores of cities and towns will go to the eight-hour basis with little trouble, because all those who were dependent upon to break the strike have been absorbed by the sixty places in which the contest has been raging during the past few months, and there will be nothing for the printing office proprietors to do but fall in line with the rest of the country. Each side believes that the eight-hour reform in a majority of the cities in which the battle begins January 2. It is not expected that any of the newspaper offices will be affected, although the Toronto convention gave local unions power to call sympathetic strikes where no agreement exists at a moment's notice.

The International Union of Pressmen is lending moral and financial aid to the printers in their strike for the eight-hour day.

TWO CARS DAMAGED.

Freight Train Backed Over Bumpers in Southwest Washington.

As a train of freight cars was being backed into the siding on what was once the south sidewalk of D street, between 13th and 14th streets, at an early hour this morning, two large box cars were backed over the bumper at the intersection of D and 14th streets and one was badly wrecked. The other had its trucks torn from under it and was also damaged. The bumper, a pile of timber and earth about six feet high and twelve feet long, was practically demolished by the rapidly moving cars, one of which went clear over it and plowed up the street on the other side. In going over the bumper the car struck a large popular tree at the corner of D and 14th streets, and sent it to the earth with a number of big branches torn off. The worst damaged of the cars was laden with heavy parts, but as far as can be seen the contents are not injured. No one was hurt in the accident, and occurring on a siding, no tracks used by moving trains, were blocked. It is stated the wreck will be cleared up in the course of the day.

Schooner in Damaged Condition.

The big four-masted schooner Charles K. Schull put into Norfolk yesterday in a badly damaged condition, the result of a battle with a gale off the Virginia capes a week ago that drove her far out to sea. She had a rough time of it, losing her spars and sails, and being battered by the heavy seas. The storm caused the vessel to be limped back to the capes, where she was picked up by a tug and taken to Norfolk. The Schull has been a frequent visitor here, and will repair damages before sailing again.

Large Schooner Sunk.

The wreck of a three-masted schooner is reported to have been sighted lying about five and one-half miles northeast of Winter Quarter light, in the vicinity of the Cape Fear river. The vessel was carrying a cargo of water. Only the topmasts of the wrecked schooner were showing above the surface of the water, and the spars showed that the vessel had been sunk in a collision, as all her spring and jib stays had been broken. There was no doubt as to what had happened, but she had no white topmast head with a ball on it, and the mast had recently been scraped. The wreck is supposed to be that of the schooner, which was last seen in the latter part of last week. No reports of collisions have been made by coming vessels at any of the Atlantic ports.

Sand Barge Sunk in Channel.

One of the large sand and gravel-carrying scows belonging to the Smead Sand and Gravel Company sprang a leak while lying in the Eastern Branch on Christmas day, and sank in the channel of the Potomac river. The vessel is lying in about 30 feet of water, about fifty feet out from the foot of the street, but does not greatly interfere with the navigation of the branch, as there is plenty of room to pass her on either side. The managers of the sand company have notified the harbor officials that they will see that warning marks are placed about the sunken boat, and that the channel will be kept open. What caused the scow to spring a leak and sink is not known, and it is stated that when the vessel was at the anchorage the water was apparently in good order, and was raising the boat will be started before the end of the week.

Schooner Merom in Distress.

The four-masted schooner Merom, a frequent visitor to this city with cargoes of ice aboard from the Maine fields, put into Hampton roads a day or two ago leaking and in distress. The vessel was on her way up the coast from Tampa, Fla., with a cargo of lumber aboard, and off Cape Hatteras she ran into a gale that blew with terrific force. The master of the schooner was afraid to take any sail off his vessel for fear of being carried ashore on that dangerous coast. While the storm was at its height, the schooner was blown away and several of the smaller spars were broken. Added to this the straining of the vessel in the gale had caused her to spring a leak, and pumps had to be kept going constantly to keep her afloat. Repairs will be made at Norfolk before she goes into service again.

UNDER HEAVY BOND.

Two Colored Men in Court Charged With Housebreaking.

Charles Monroe and Harry Garrett, colored, were arraigned in the Police Court, before Judge Kimball, today on a charge of housebreaking. Each of the defendants pleaded guilty to the charge. At the request of Assistant District Attorney Ralph Higgins, who stated that there was another case against them, bond was fixed at $1,000. In default of that bail the defendants were committed to jail. The men were charged with entering the stable of B. H. Smart Christmas night and stealing a harness valued at $20.

Last Friday morning, when Mr. Smart went to the stable, he found that it had been broken into during the night and a lap robe, blanket and a whip taken out. No trace of the thieves was found. Christmas night the performance was repeated, a harness disappearing on that occasion. Late this morning, Detective William Adams of the first precinct arrested the defendants named, who were trying to sell the harness to a huckster. Precinct Detective Burrill stated, he said, connected the men with the first case of housebreaking also.

Lighthouse Service Orders.

The lighthouse service has issued the following notice regarding the changes in the ships on the Diamond Shoal station, off the North Carolina coast:

Diamond Shoal Light vessel, season of North Carolina, stationed about five and three-eighths miles southeasterly from the easterly point of the outer Diamond Shoal, off the southeast of North Carolina, and about fourteen and one-eighth miles southeast, quarter south, from Cape Hatteras lighthouse.

About December 31, 1905, light vessel No. 72 will be replaced by light vessel No. 71. Light vessel No. 72 will show lights and sound a fog signal during the same time as that of the vessel on light vessel No. 71, and her general appearance is the same as that of the latter vessel, except that she bears the number 72 instead of 71 on each bow and each quarter.

It is stated that No. 71, as soon as she can be supplied with provisions, will take station on Nantuxet shoals, to temporarily replace the lightship lost in the big storm of about three weeks ago.

Baltimore Boat's Winter Schedule.

The winter schedule of the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway Company's steamers between this city and Baltimore will go into effect tomorrow, and instead of three trips per week between this city and Baltimore, there will be four. The party came to Washington for the particular purpose of inspecting the new Connecticut avenue bridge and they spent much of the afternoon on that great structure.

A fine of $300 was imposed by Judge Dodge, in the United States district court, at Boston yesterday, upon the Oceanic Steam Navigation Company, which had pleaded guilty to allowing aliens to escape from its steamships Romanic and Canopic.

Do Not Wear a Long Face.

There is nothing that will put you to the front so rapidly in the business or social world as a cheerful disposition and a pleasant appearance. Dyspepsia is the greatest handicap to the cheerful appearance and disposition that exists. In fact, it is almost a human impossibility for a man with a severe case of dyspepsia to look pleasant. The continuous, miserable, east-down feeling is bound to make itself shown in his appearance and conversation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the dyspepsia's certain relief. They do the work that his stomach is unable to do, and by relieving that organ of its burden permit it to regain its health and strength and again become active and useful in its functions. All druggists at 25 cents a box.

Riverdale, Bushwood, Lancasters, Howards, Coburns, Stones, Leonardtown, Abell's, Pine Point, Adams, Lodge, Murray's, Point, Kinsale, Coan, Walnut Point, Cowarts, Bandolier, Lewis, Grasons, Millers, Bromes and Porto Bello.

It is understood the steamer Northumberland will be used for the service, and that the new schedule will be run until next spring, when the three-trip schedule will be restored.

Golden Cross Election.

Meridian Commandery, No. 178, U. O. G. C., has elected the following officers for the ensuing term: N. C. Mrs. Miriam Tucker; V. N. C. Miss Lauretta Henrick; prelate, Mr. A. A. Walker; K. of R. Mr. E. F. Higgins; P. K. of R. Mrs. Clara A. Lombard; treasurer, Mr. R. A. Walker; herald, Mr. Elmer C. Gill; W. I. G. Mrs. T. A. R. Gonzenbach; W. O. G. Mr. William Muirhead; trustees, Clara A. Lombard, D. M. Ogden and E. F. Higgins; representative to the Grand Commandery, D. M. Ogden; alternate, Clara A. Lombard.

The officers-elect will be installed Friday evening, January 12, 1906, by Deputy Grand Commander Ledy Vondora Higgins and a staff of grand officers.

Grand Commander F. M. Bradley and the officers of the Grand Commandery will pay Meridian Commandery their annual visitation Friday evening, January 20, 1906.

Philadelphians in the City.

W. J. Douglass, engineer of bridges of the District of Columbia, had as his guests today a company of municipal engineers from Philadelphia under the leadership of Chief Engineer Webster of the department of public works and Henry H. Quibby, assistant engineer of bridges. The party came to Washington for the particular purpose of inspecting the new Connecticut avenue bridge and they spent much of the afternoon on that great structure.

A fine of $300 was imposed by Judge Dodge, in the United States district court, at Boston yesterday, upon the Oceanic Steam Navigation Company, which had pleaded guilty to allowing aliens to escape from its steamships Romanic and Canopic.
